Call for Papers

Class, Gender, and Ideology
Twenty-Fourth Annual North American Labor History Conference
Wayne State University, October 17-19, 2002

The Program Committee of the North American Labor History Conference invites proposals for panels and papers on the theme, Class, Gender, and Ideology, for our twenty-fourth meeting to be held October 17-19, 2002, at Wayne State University in Detroit. Some suggested themes are

- Class ideologies in both the working classes and among middle and upper classes, as they interaction with gender and racial ideologies and/or define class identity and politics
- Nationalism among workers and in working class and labor movements, in combination with or in opposition to class-based movements
- Conservatism and radicalism among workers and in working class movements and/or cross-class ideologies and political movements
- Labor and/or working class internationalism
- Reaction toward and repression of labor and working-class movements by national states, in such periods as revolutionary Europe, late 19th repression, the Red Scare in the U.S., and the Cold War
- The intersection of class and gender ideology in defining class identities and/or politics and /or in shaping labor practices and politics

The program committee encourages comparative and interdisciplinary scholarship from a broad range of national and international contexts, the integration of public historians and labor activists into conference sessions, and the use of differing panel formats (workshops, roundtable discussions, and multimedia as well as traditional papers); and it welcomes sessions which may address the topic through the lens of class, gender, race, ethnicity, and sexuality.

Please submit panel and paper proposals (including a 1-2 page abstracts and brief CVs or biographical statements for all participants) by March 1st, 2002, to
